

When you come to the edge of all the light you have, and must take a step into the darkness of the unknown, believe that one of two things will happen.

Either there will be something solid for you to stand on - or you will be taught how to fly.

Patrick Overton